

Paulie's Plunge

Teaser:

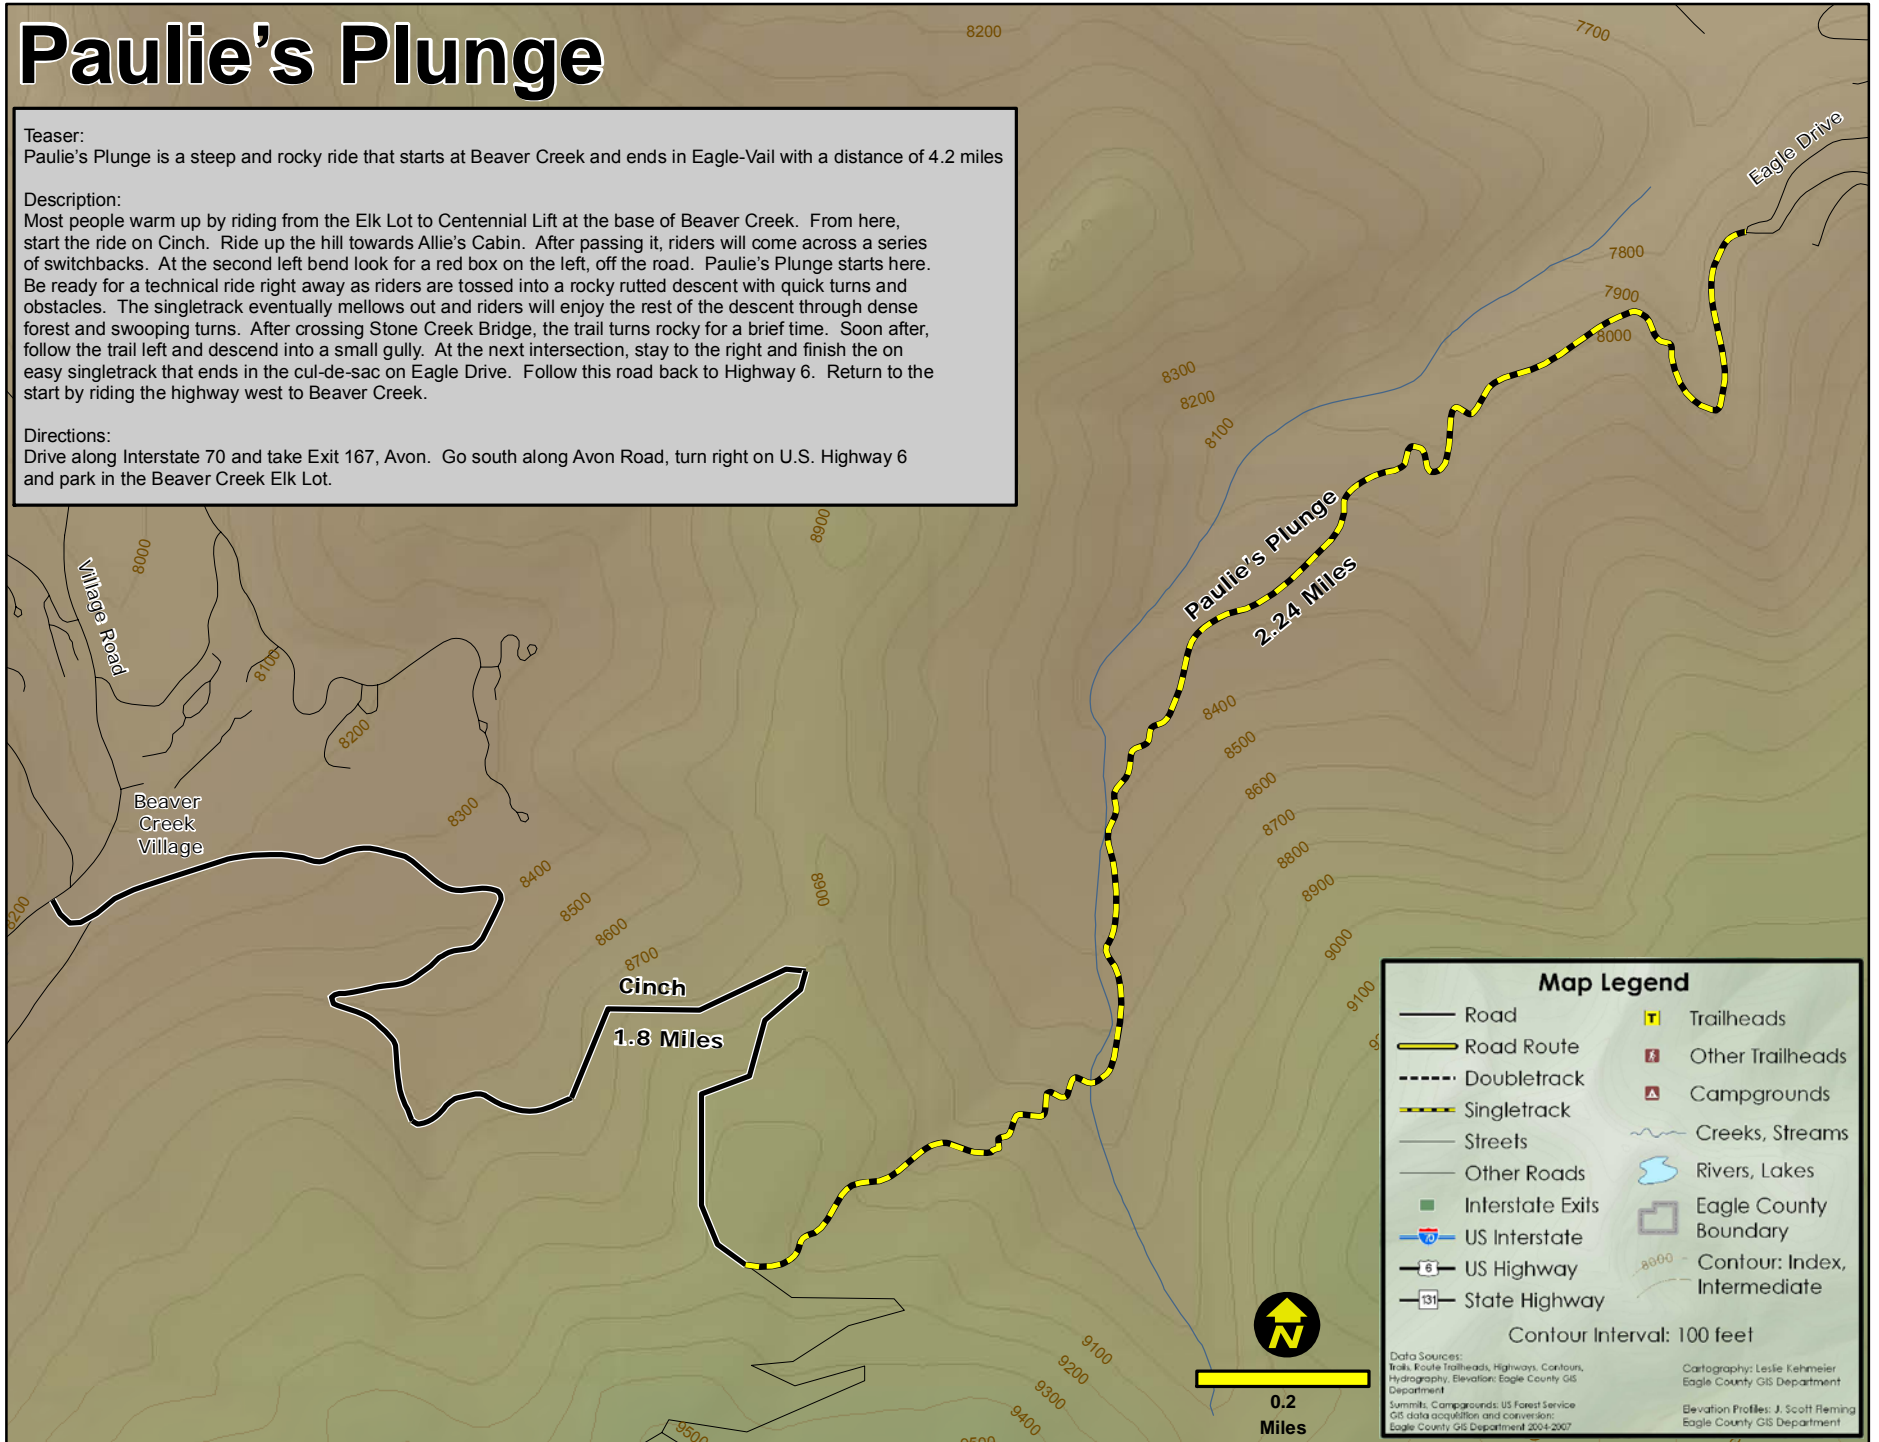

Paulie's Plunge is a steep and rocky ride that starts at Beaver Creek and ends in Eagle-Vail with a distance of 4.2 miles

Description:

Most people warm up by riding from the Elk Lot to Centennial Lift at the base of Beaver Creek. From here, start the ride on Cinch. Ride up the hill towards Allie's Cabin. After passing it, riders will come across a series of switchbacks. At the second left bend look for a red box on the left, off the road. Paulie's Plunge starts here. Be ready for a technical ride right away as riders are tossed into a rocky rutted descent with quick turns and obstacles. The singletrack eventually mellows out and riders will enjoy the rest of the descent through dense forest and swooping turns. After crossing Stone Creek Bridge, the trail turns rocky for a brief time. Soon after, follow the trail left and descend into a small gully. At the next intersection, stay to the right and finish the on easy singletrack that ends in the cul-de-sac on Eagle Drive. Follow this road back to Highway 6. Return to the start by riding the highway west to Beaver Creek.

Directions:

Drive along Interstate 70 and take Exit 167, Avon. Go south along Avon Road, turn right on U.S. Highway 6 and park in the Beaver Creek Elk Lot.
